The buttons on the left will be rollovers with links to different parts of the site. Text about the site will appear in the center of the graphic.

The title of the page will appear at the top with a picture of a house on some backdrop. I want to use the words real estate to form a door and window.

My first idea is to have a header across the top with navigation links on the left. The content would appear in the lower right area.

Another alternative I thought about is similar to #3. I think I like #3 better. These two are pretty much the same.

5

Having the navigation at the bottom allow for to have wider content pages. But I'm not sure I like having the links at the bottom.

Since #3 is the way I think I'm going, this is another iteration of #3. This time, I am using the logo in the upper left as the link to go back Home.
